Queensbury Hotel plans rooftop bar

More inside ▶ 6

Queensbury Hotel general manager Tyler Herrick, left, with the hotel's owner Ed Moore, said, "I think it would be amazing if Zack and I had our 40th birthday party at the 'Top of the Q.'" Zack is Mr. Moore's son (who was away when this photo was taken) and is Mr. Herrick's business partner in Spruce Management, a hotel management company. Mr. Herrick and Zack Moore are 36 years old now. It gives them four years to complete the rooftop bar. Chronicle photo/Mark Frost

Grow garlic, she says

By Cathy DeDe

Chronicle Managing Editor

Garlic! You know you love it. Why not grow it?

The pungent allium, related both to onions and the decorative flowers, is in fact one of the easier things you can grow in your home garden, and it's a keeper.

Easy,
tasty, pretty

We grow enough in our backyard garden to keep ourselves and several co-gardening families we share our space with covered in garlic for the year.

Garlic is planted in the fall, before the first frost, typically around Columbus Day, or even into very early November.

The garlic cloves you eat are

Speaker touts benefits of communities owning forests

By David Cederstrom
Chronicle Staff Writer

The Town of Chester in northern Warren County is thinking in terms of creating a community forest, and a speaker from a group encouraging such forests drew 40 people for a March 30 talk about the concept at the Chester town library.
