Old Salvation Army building transformed

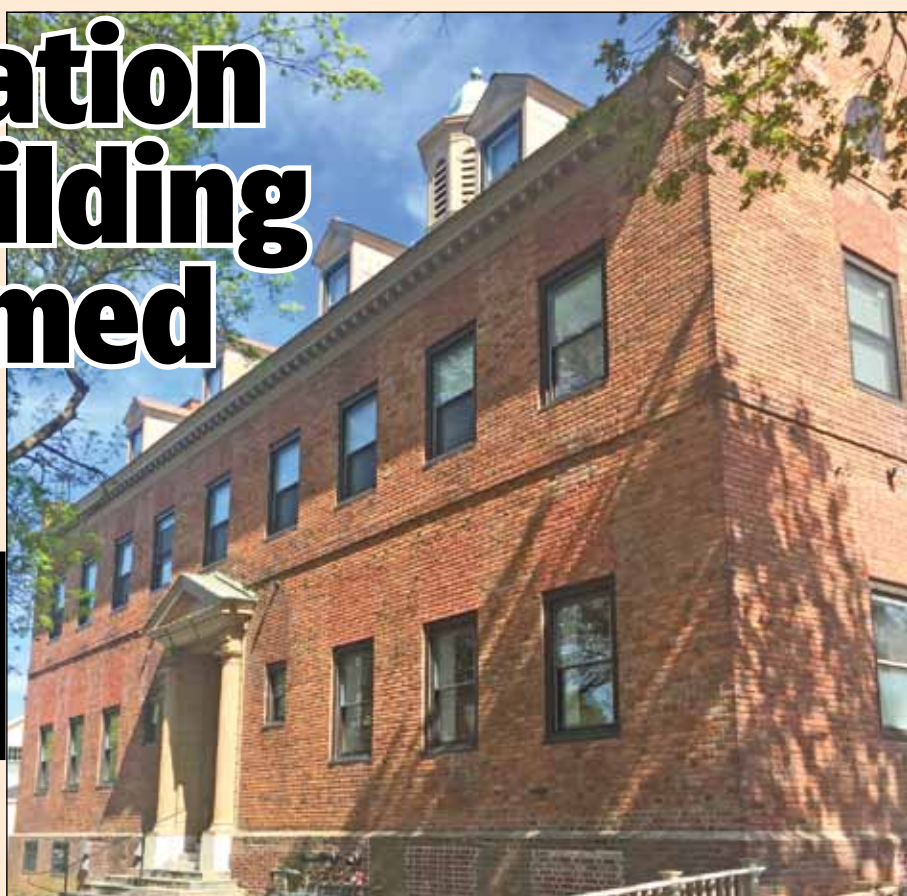

By Gordon Woodworth

Chronicle News Editor

Plastic surgeon Dr. Dimitri Koumanis and a partner have transformed the former Salvation Army headquarters at 13 Chester Street in Glens Falls into a modern mixed-use medical office building that includes four two-bedroom apartments — all rented — and a shared rooftop terrace. Dr. Kou-

The four apartments — all occupied — rent from $1,000 to $1,800 a month, have large windows and high ceilings.

'Wake up, Mark Frost,' 'your outdated liberal ideas,' 'your hatred of conservative Republicans'

To the Editor:

Well, Mark, I guess the stuff hit the fan, huh, with you and your hatred of conservative Republicans. A quote from your tirade against our duly elected president, "they have rocketed into infinite absurdity."

Why, Mark? He's brought the North Korean president to the diplomatic table and wants to denude his country.

Did Secretary of State Clinton do as good? Hell no! Mark, wake up, the Democrats don't know everything. But like you say, some people loathe Donald Trump like you do.

But you do have a paper of your own to spew your hatred, outdated liberal ideas. I don't know why you're shocked at other people's hatred, such as your own friends towards you when you and your son hate people like me who own guns and support the Second Amendment. By the way, Mark,

Emil's WW2 recollection

By Emil Lindstrand

I was born in Queensbury in 1925. I enlisted in the Army when I was 17. I thought it would be exciting to join the paratroopers and so it was.

D-Day was the name given to the invasion date. It was called Operation Overlord. The planning was complex and secret. We
