

Lake George seen as never before

By David Cederstrom

Chronicle Staff Writer

The Jefferson Project has taken its next major step — creation of a 2,000 square-foot Data Visualization Laboratory at the Darrin Fresh Water Institute in Bolton.

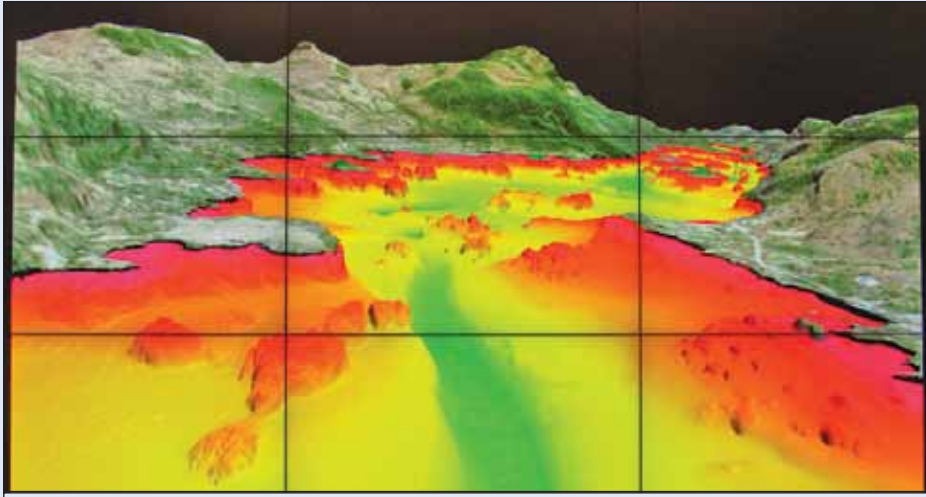

“Things no human has seen before” will become visible there, IBM senior vice-president Dr. John E. Kelly III said at the project’s public unveiling on Oct. 17.

The lab “may seem like a modest building, but there are two enormous supercomputers” inside, explained Dr. Kelly, IBM executive, alumnus and trustee of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, part-time resident of Lake George and a driving force in the Jefferson Project, which aims to create unprecedented understanding to help “preserve Lake George for future generations.”

“Massive amounts of data” from sensors in and around the

It may look ‘modest,’ but it contains two supercomputers: It’s the Jefferson Project’s new Helen-Jo and John E. Kelly III '78 Data Visualization Laboratory at the Darrin Fresh Water Institute in Bolton. Its architecture is in the style of the Institute’s main building, upper left.

Drew: Green & gold in GF water

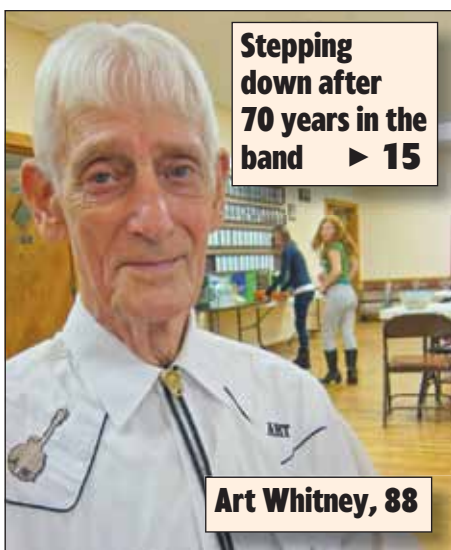

By Mark Frost

Chronicle Editor

The last time I interviewed Drew FitzGerald, he was a first-grader at Kensington Road School in 1977 in Glens Falls.

Last week I sat down with Drew again. He built a career as a business marketer/strategist in Los Angeles, but it turns out that he’s

Says GF botched sale of Civic Center

To the Editor:

[Re the Glens Falls Civic Center:] Anybody with half a brain could see what was going on here almost from the beginning. It was so patently obvious that I am actually embarrassed for the mayor et al and I don’t even know them. This @”*%# show was the definition of cro-
