Wing heir gives trove to ACC

By Mark Frost
Chronicle Editor

A seventh generation descendant of Glens Falls founder Abraham Wing has donated a trove of family documents — including many in Wing's own handwriting — to the Hill Collection at SUNY Adirondack college library in Queensbury.

The heir, Kit Cornell, worked with Paul McCarty, executive director of the Fort Edward Historical Association, in making the gift. It has documents dating as early as 1717. One paper in Wing's handwriting dated March 11th 1776 complains: "Stolen, taken and carried out of my house by

He knows he's been beaten

At Saturday's $1.6-million Travers — Triple Crown champ American Pharoah (#2) is still flexing every muscle but his jockey Victor Espinoza clearly knows he's been beaten, by 16-1 longshot Keen Ice (#7), ridden by Javier Castellano. You wonder if American Pharoah at this point knew the outcome, too. Turn to page 46: Dramatic photo & story.

Glens Falls grad Marika McCoola has New York Times Best Seller

Baba Yaga's Assistant, Marika McCoola's graphic novel for young adults, is #3 on the Times' Aug. 30 list of best selling graphic novels.

Grows rabbits for meat

By Gordon Woodworth
Chronicle News Editor

Demand for the meat from Ed Pacyna's Adirondack Rabbit Ranch in Lake Luzerne is so strong that he says he might expand soon if it keeps up. "In the last two weeks, I've sold every rabbit I had," he told The Chronicle when interviewed in early August. "My freezer is empty. This is really starting to take off."

Mr. Pacyna, 49, has a varied career. He's a licensed massage therapist with an office at 40 Main Street in Queensbury. And he's a former bodywork technician at Wilhelm Auto. He said he started raising rabbits five years ago after buying
