Building your own canoe in Luzerne

By David Cederstrom
Chronicle Staff Writer

The Adirondack Folk School in Lake Luzerne offers a 10-day class for $1,800 in which you build your own canoe.

The Chronicle took a look last week after Ed Moore, a local businessman who most recently bought the Queensbury Hotel, alerted us both to the course — and the fact that he was in the midst of taking it.

Mr. Moore and his brothers Dennis and Matt, their cousin Jim Ziembo and brother-in-law Mark Hannan all built canoes in the class, taught by Larry Benjamin.

Mr. Benjamin said he got started in canoe making by building

Megyn Kelly talked to law school grads & to Chronicle

By Gordon Woodworth
Chronicle News Editor

Fox News host Megyn Kelly, speaking to The Chronicle before addressing Albany Law School's graduates last Friday at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, defended her May 17 prime-time interview with Donald Trump and insisted no one has asked the presumptive Republican presidential nominee harder questions than she has.

Ms. Kelly, a 1995 Albany Law grad, was commencement speaker just three days after her in-
