

Exchange Street has it going on!

Growing hot- bed of entre- preneurs in GF

By Gordon Woodworth
Chronicle News Editor

Exchange Street in downtown Glens Falls is on the rise, with an established and growing cluster of locally owned businesses

Ann Parrish has two new tenants at the pre-Civil War building she owns at 16 Exchange Street and where for 15 years she has successfully operated her Milk & Honey clothing and gift boutique.

She rented an upstairs office to Kate Austin-Avon, who runs her Advokate web design and social media company there.

And in early October, Cristina and Nicole Laubenheimer will move their Juicin' Jar business

How to spend Cuomo $10- million!

By Mark Frost
Chronicle Editor

Now that the Cuomo administration has announced that the City of Glens Falls has won $10-million for economic development, it's time to figure out exactly how the money should be spent. As you might expect, I have suggestions.

First, while the money is earmarked for revitalization of South Street, you and I both know that in government funding boundaries are flexible. So I'm defining the mission broadly.

Make hospital 'GFHHHHN'

Use some of those millions to add a Hudson Headwaters Health Network wing onto Glens Falls Hospital. Teaming the region's two dominant providers will cre-
