Hubbub over LG bubblers, ice eaters

By Gordon Woodworth
Chronicle News Editor

The Lake George ice is out, but the debate about "ice-eaters" and dock bubblers rages on.

The devices keep water from freezing in the winter, hoping to prevent shifting ice from damaging docks and boathouses.

Last year's catastrophic dock damage, though, has some arguing they do more harm than good. Others defend the devices.

(This year, damage does not appear to be as widespread, as the warm temperatures and recent rain melted the ice before the wind could push it around.)

"Some people think they are saviors, but others think the ice-eaters open up too much shoreline and then everything is destroyed when the wind starts blowing," says Dave Wick, executive director of the Lake George Park Commission. "We see both sides, but we don't have any evidence over years that says they are good or bad."

Mr. Wick said the Park Commission has been urged to regu-
