

Urges: Add a buoy at Boon Bay!

Hi Mark,

For the past 10 years, or so, I've sat on the shore of Boon Bay [Lake George] and watched as people in their boats run aground on the submerged rocks that once were Rush Island (often called Lone Tree Island) at the tip of Hemlock Point.

When the island was barely above water, with its one tree to announce its presence, people easily saw it.

Plus, two lines of buoys, forming a V, marked two ridges of rocks that converged at the island. Even the worst boaters could avoid the rocks that are all around there.

About a decade ago, the tree fell over one last time. The people who formerly stood it back up and wired it in place finally

Peter Asher, rock & roll master

By Mark Frost
Chronicle Editor

The Strand Theater in Hudson Falls scored another big-league coup last Thursday. It brought to its stage Peter Asher, who at the age of 75 turns out still to be full of rock and roll (and of himself).

He and two cohorts made music, and he told one

Wow! That's a monster lake trout

Caleb Potts of Monticello caught it Tuesday on Lake George, fishing with Joe Greco's Justy-Joe Sportfishing Charters (which provided this photo). The fish, measuring 37 inches and weighing 15.5 pounds, was released, Mr. Greco said.

House hunt ends; no buy
