

Lake George fish survey under way

By Gordon Woodworth
 Chronicle News Editor

Three times this summer at eight different sites, researchers from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute are laying out fyke nets — fish traps — in a fisheries survey for the Jefferson Project, RPI's high-tech partnership with the Fund for Lake George and IBM.

The Chronicle went along last week when post-doctoral researchers Matt Schuler and Jon Borrelli, and UAlbany undergrad Tristan Sokach-Minnick checked the nets in Bolton just north of Huddle Bay and at the mouth of Northwest Bay Brook.

The 104 fish caught near Huddle Bay and the 58 caught at Northwest Bay Brook were each weighed and measured to determine relative health, and then released.

Part of Jefferson Project, looking for signs revealing health of the lake.

Almost all the fish caught near Huddle Bay were pumpkinseeds, with some smallmouth bass and one tiny largemouth bass.

In Northwest Bay, there were largemouth bass, pumpkinseeds (sunfish), rock bass, perch and a yellow bullhead.

(In the two-plus hours, wildlife sightings also included a bald

Mark: Harris Grocery in Lake Luzerne is unique!

By Mark Frost
 Chronicle Editor

Want to visit a unique and interesting business? Check out Harris Grocery on Route 9N in Lake Luzerne, directly across the highway from New York State's Fourth Lake Campground. It's not just a store. It's one personal, creative touch after another — on top of a history that embodies community and success.

I deliver Chronicles there every Thursday, but I've known proprietor Jim "Jungle" Mosher going back almost 40 years, when we were "road warriors" calling
