Deer swimming across Lake George

Glens Falls builder Matt Cifone took this photo on Sunday, Oct. 17, of three deer swimming east, between Long Island and Pilot Knob.

The Dorset Farmers Market takes place Sundays on the idle J.K. Adams wood-working factory floor. Here a mushroom vendor. Chronicle photo/Mark Frost

Meanwhile in Vermont

By Mark Frost
Chronicle Editor

After our plans fell through for an ambitious long weekend afar in mid-October, my wife Sandra rallied to book a short weekend nearby, in Dorset, Vermont.

Instead of driving five hours, we drove less than an hour.

Sandy, being Sandy, was able to find at the last minute a cottage as lodging, and dinner reservations for both Friday and Saturday at peak foliage when reservations anywhere were hard to come by.

On the drive over we made

Matt Rozell: Give OK to higher-power motorized e-bikes

Editor:

I read Cathy DeDe's article, "Should motorized e-bikes be allowed on county bikeway?" (10-7-21), and if you can spare the space, would like to comment. I am a 60-year-old 'retired' educator, and author of several books, the writing of which kind of requires long stretches of sedentary activity, which my doctor suggested may be as bad as smoking a pack of cigarettes a day. This year I gave myself some pres-

Had to stop & think about it...

Chronicle editor Mark Frost, who took this photo, writes, we were delivering Chronicles when we drove by Bacon Hill Reformed Church, situated near Winney's Blueberry Farm north of Schuylerville. We turned around to read the message. Pretty sharp! As you know, I'm impressed when a not-for-profit — in this case, a church — shows marketing pizzazz.

Applauds Chronicle

To the Editor:

I am impressed. The Chronicle is exactly what a small town newspaper should be. This week's election edition is full of candidates' statements (space provided gratis), paid political ads, stories about
