Dating apps: His down-low

By Zander Frost

Chronicle Staff Writer

I don't know a single person who enjoys dating apps.

They're shallow, depressing, potentially expensive, and now, often essential to dating.

Covid lockdowns expedited the trend. Tinder, Hinge, and Bumble were the only ways to meet a potential partner.

Even when restrictions eased, apps were still necessary. Hard to meet someone at a bar when you aren't allowed to leave your table, and have a mask on!

While the pandemic feels behind us, dating apps are not.

When you swipe, you make snap assessments based on pictures and short bios. And you know somewhere within a 20-mile radius, someone else is
