Mean Max does darts

By Ben Westcott
Chronicle Staff Writer

Thursday night in downtown Glens Falls, for 20 people at least, means darts at Mean Max Brew Works on Glen Street.

There's actually a waiting list to get into the league.

Waiting list to join, draws throwers age 20's to 70's

Teams of two face off against two opponents a night. The pair with the most points at the end of the season is the champion and wins some merch.

But really it's not about the competition, although that's certainly part of it.

"It's just a break from the normal week," says Brice Amsden, 29, of Glens Falls, a league

Not a bad sign!

With so many businesses closing lately, alarm bells sounded when the sign went missing in front of the Rios family's seasonal Ridge Terrace restaurant on Route 9L.

Not to worry. Ridge Terrace posted on its Facebook page: "Heading off any crazy rumors, we're simply having the sign painted blue so the laser beams skip us this summer.

"Or we've asked the incredibly talented Hannah Williams to give us a makeover. Somewhere there's a meme shrugging why not both."

Matt Rozell movie debut

By Cathy DeDe
Chronicle Managing Editor

I often say, not really joking, that Glens Falls is the center of the universe. Saturday afternoon at the Strand Theatre in Hudson Falls was surely evidence for the case.

The occasion: A first private preview screening of A Train Near Magdeberg in what's planned as a four-episode documentary about the extraordinary — truly, extraordinary — efforts and discovery by Hudson Falls teacher Matt Rozell.

You know the basics? Mr.

I was raised to believe you should never cave to peer pressure.

I even won an essay contest on the subject in fifth grade.

Officer Jeff Crotty selected me to read it in front of the entire school at my D.A.R.E.
