

New bar set at the former Sandy's Clam Bar

By Zander Frost
Chronicle Staff Writer

Sandy's Clam Bar will be a bar again.

Queensbury grad Liam O'Mara, 25, plans to open Corner Pour at 41 South Street, the Sandy's building now owned and redeveloped by Bonacio Development.

"It's going to be kind of a neighborhood bar," Mr. O'Mara tells The Chronicle.

"It's not going to be anything upscale. Anybody that wants to come will be able to afford it."

Mr. O'Mara comments, "I think it's great all the fancier upscale places that are opening, but like I said, I grew up here. I know there's a large de-

Corner Pour, he said, is "going to be more of your casual, cheaper beer. We'll have all cocktails. We'll have some wines, kind of anything that you would expect at more of a casual bar."

"There will be light food," plus "a small platform/stage in the corner, so we're hoping for

P.J. Ferguson, Whitehall via Nashville back at the Strand

By Cathy DeDe
Chronicle Managing Editor

One year after his sold-out homecoming concert at the Strand Theater in Hudson Falls, PJ Ferguson — the Whitehall native turned Nashville country-rocker — returns to the Strand on Friday, Sept. 11, for Homecoming 2. Tickets are nearly sold.

Now 30 years old, PJ and his band, the eight-person Tennessee Strange, are embarking on a 10 city Northeast U.S. tour. It starts on September 9 at the famed Daryl's House in Pawling, N.Y., (founded by Daryl Hall of Hall and Oates fame).

First, he's back home to marry fiancée Lauren Sheridan on September 6. Then, it's
